

Loki

Loki, a young male cat, was brought into Mount Laurel Animal Hospital for straining to urinate. Initially, a urinary catheter was placed to make him more comfortable and give us time to treat the underlying cause. After treatment and removal of the urinary catheter, Loki's issue remained prevalent. Unfortunately the medical recommendation at this point was a salvage procedure called a perineal urethrostomy. This would hopefully be a permanent solution to save Loki's life.

Loki's parents did not hesitate to move forward although there were financial concerns. After evaluating their strong desire to save Loki, and financial need, they were chosen as an Empath Project recipient.

Loki is now feeling better and continuing to enjoy a long and happy life!

Empath is absolutely outstanding with what they do and offer. I almost lost my cat, which is my best friend, and I didn't thanks to a great donation from empath. Even if you think you wouldn't get the donation, it is still worth trying because I never and would have guessed I would get one and I gave it a shot. I got a call telling me what a significant helpful donation I received. Empath, you guys are number one!
